

Assistant/Associate Professor Tenure-Track, Public Health Nutrition School of Public Health, UC Berkeley

The School of Public Health at the University of California, Berkeley, seeks a distinguished scholar for a State-funded, tenure track position, at any level, in Public Health Nutrition. The position offers opportunities for collaboration within the School of Public Health, the Dr. Robert C. and Veronica Atkins Center for Weight and Health, and other Berkeley campus centers and departments. Areas of interest within public health nutrition are broad and include designing, implementing, and evaluating community or school - based interventions, social marketing or health communication related to public health nutrition, environmental nutrition, agriculture and food systems, food and nutrition policy, economics of food and nutrition, nutrition related disease prevention and management, and nutritional epidemiology.

Responsibilities: The position requires an active and productive research program, the development and teaching of graduate level courses, advising and mentoring graduate students, and service contributions within and outside the university.

Qualifications: Applicants should have a doctoral degree in nutrition, a biological or social science, medicine, epidemiology or other field of public health, teaching experience and a demonstrated record of excellence in public health nutrition research. Nutrition science background preferred. We are particularly interested in candidates who have a demonstrated commitment to improving access to higher education for disadvantaged students, and whose research combines a focus on public health nutrition with the examination and elimination of health disparities for communities of color and other minority populations.

Salary: Competitive and depends upon individual qualifications.

Deadline: December 1, 2010. Review of applications will begin November 15, 2010. Early applications are encouraged.

To apply: Please self-register at <http://esph.berkeley.edu:80/candidate/selRegister.php?i=72> and provide letter of application, including research interests and teaching philosophy, curriculum vitae, sample publications, and names and contact information for three references. You may also mail your requested materials to:

Professor Lia Fernald, Chair
Public Health Nutrition Search Committee
c/o Susan Kayman
School of Public Health
50 University Hall, MC 7360
University of California
Berkeley, CA 94720-7360

The University of California is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer.