

Yale University. The Center for Research on Inequalities and the Life Course (CIQLE) seeks applications for a postdoctoral fellowship for one or two years, to start in Fall 2011. Candidates should be interested in quantitative empirical research on social stratification and particularly on the processes that generate inequalities of social class, race/ethnicity, generation, and gender over the life course and across generations. Experience on working with longitudinal data is desirable.

CIQLE is one of three research centers in the Department of Sociology at Yale University. The faculty fellows of the Center have extensive experience in research on various topics on inequality and the life course, including changes and cross-national variation in the life course (Brückner, Maralani), social mobility (Breen, Maralani), education (Breen, Maralani), work and occupational careers (Breen, Brückner), family dynamics and family divisions of labor (Breen, Brückner, Wildeman), health inequality (Brückner, Maralani, Wildeman), incarceration (Wildeman), and gender inequalities (Breen, Brückner). CIQLE hosts a weekly seminar, thematic conferences, and a working paper series.

Applicants should expect to use 50% of their time for research collaboration with CIQLE faculty. Current stipends are approximately $37,740 per year plus benefits. Applicants should have completed their Ph.D. by the beginning of the appointment but not earlier than 2008.

Please send a cover letter, curriculum vita, and a 2-5 page description of your postdoctoral research plans electronically to elisabeth.kennedy@yale.edu (preferred) or by mail to Hannah Brückner, Department of Sociology, Yale University, P.O. Box 208265, New Haven, CT 06520-8265, and arrange for two confidential letters of reference to be sent to the same address. The deadline for applications is April 3, 2011.
