

Applied Demography/Policy Analysis Position

AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA

The Demographics & Workforce Group of the University of Virginia's Weldon Cooper Center for Public Service invites bright, creative, and motivated individuals to apply for a Research and Policy Analyst position.

Nestled at the foot of Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains, only two hours from Washington D.C., in one of America's "best places to live," the University of Virginia offers an ideal environment for intellectual inquiry and opportunities to contribute to demographic research in the public interest.

We wish to expand our public service capabilities by attracting top quality professionals interested in demographic research and its application to public discourse and policy. This position requires a graduate degree in demography, sociology, economics, geography, statistics, public policy, or related fields. Proficiency in SAS, SPSS, STATA or R is required, as are excellent oral and written communication skills and commitment to work in a team-focused environment in service to the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The Demographics & Workforce Group offers a dynamic, stimulating, and cooperative setting for self-motivated individuals. The successful candidate will develop, research, and publish findings on topics of interest, consistent with the public service goals of our organization. In addition, this individual will work collaboratively with others on our team to provide ongoing service to clients.

POSITION DETAILS

This is a full-time, 12-month research position. While grant-funded, our group's record of maintaining adequate grant support provides a measure of security. The position is posted at <https://jobs.virginia.edu> (posting #: 0611606); all applications should be submitted through this website.
