

The Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University invites applicants for an assistant, associate or full professor in demography, health and public affairs, to begin fall 2018. The appointment may be made jointly with a social or natural science department. Areas of particular interest include demographic methods, migration, fertility, marriage, epidemiology, health, disease, and development. Candidates should have a strong research agenda, a commitment to graduate and undergraduate teaching, and well-articulated interests in public policy; Ph.D. is required.

Interested candidates should submit online at at <https://puwebp.princeton.edu/AcadHire/apply/application.xhtml?listingId=3081> a letter of interest, a curriculum vita, a 2-3 page statement summarizing research accomplishments and future plans. Please provide contact information for three references. For junior candidates, referees will be contacted directly by email with instructions for submitting a confidential recommendation on your behalf. Screening will begin on October 1, 2017 and continue until positions are filled.

Women and members of underrepresented groups are strongly encouraged to apply.

This position is subject to the University's background check policy.